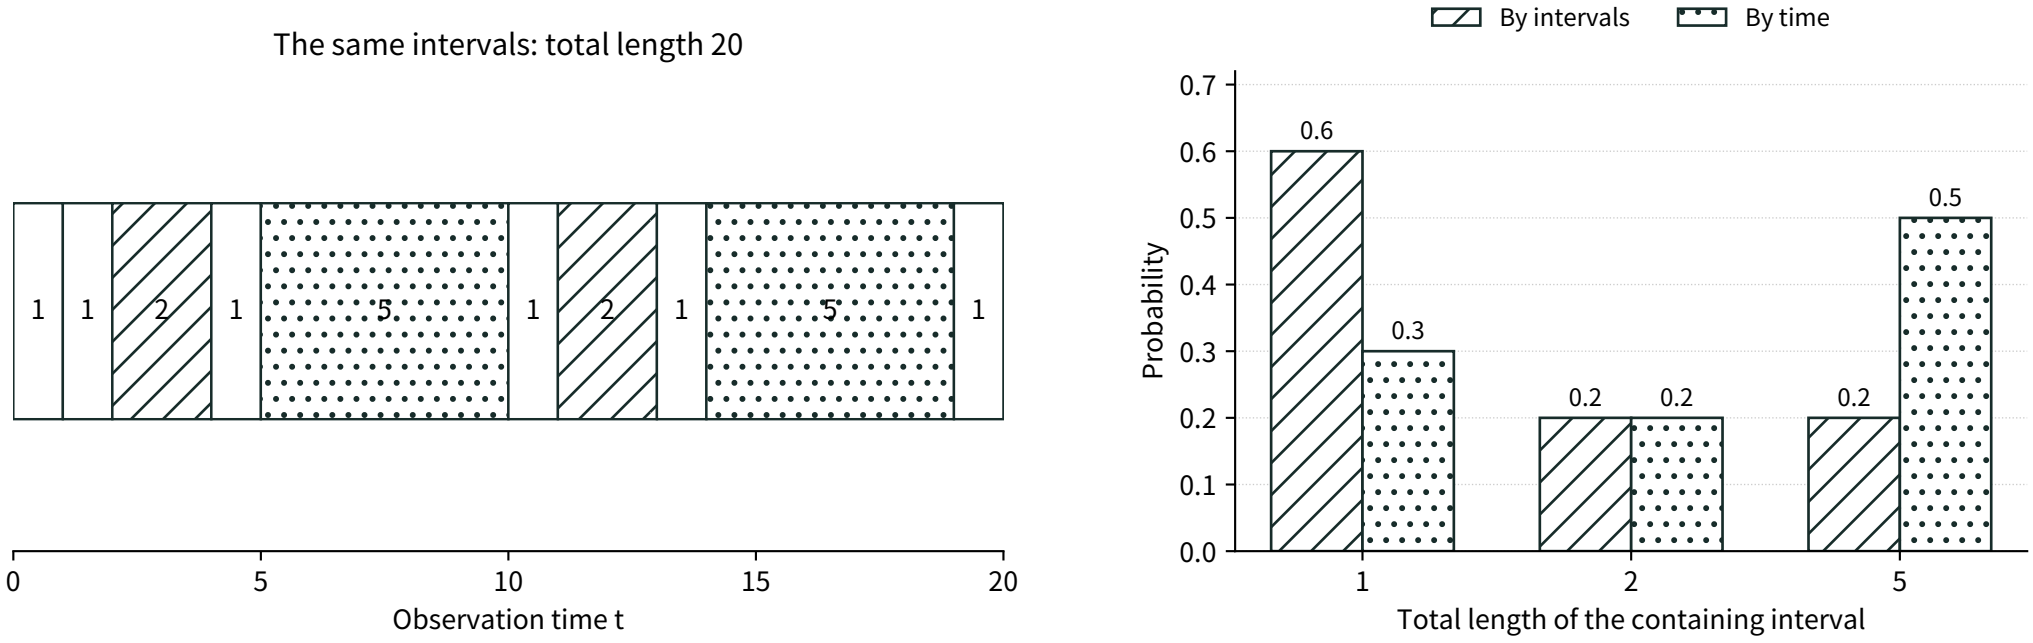
A random time is more likely to fall in a longer interval



Event weight = count / 10; time weight = length × count / 20.

A finite deterministic illustration: interval length is not residual life; no renewal limit theorem is proved.